

Bio

Irene S. Wu, Ph.D. is an expert on the international politics, history, and regulation of communications technology. Her current research is to measure soft power in the international system, a project launched while she was a fellow at the Wilson Center. Her recent book, Forging Trust Communities: How Technology Changes Politics (Johns Hopkins 2015), tells how activists and governments around the world use the new tech of the day to get people to work together, from the telegraph to social media. www.forgingtrustcommunities.com. Her chapter on regulation in China is forthcoming in Policy, Regulation and Innovation in China's Electricity and Telecom Industries (Oxford 2019). Dr. Wu is a senior analyst in the Office of Economic Analysis at the Federal Communications Commission. She has taught in Georgetown University in the Communications, Culture, and Technology program since 2007 and holds degrees from both Harvard and Johns Hopkins' School of Advanced International Studies (SAIS).
